The exit of the blouse has been so frequently predicted that it is always a surprise, although a pleasant one, the beginning of a senson to see dainty Clouses displayed, with new embellish ments, which are practical and convenient. They are particularly smart this season, enlivened with embroidery,

There is a major in a certain Eng-lish regiment who has a great con-tempt for incapacity of any kind and is somewhat impatient into the bargain. Some time ago he was in charge of a detachment of men, and a ser-geant complained that he could get no man to undertake the duty of barber to the compliny.

"Is there no gardener in the com-pany?" asked the major testily. "I seem to remember one. Send him to a colone in the French army and maycr of Toulouse. He was a brave man and a dashing officer. During one of the hottest engagements of the terrible year, noticing that his troops were bending forward under a galling fire to escape the bullets of the enemy while he alone maintained an erect position, he exclaimed, "Since when, I should like to know, has so much politeness been shown to the Prussians?"

The sarcasm took instantaneous effect. The sarcasm took instantaneous effect, for the soldiers rushed forward and carried everything before them.

An ancient statute ascribed to Howel the Good, a Welch prince, who ruled in 948, regulated the price of cats. A penny was the price of a kitten before its eyes were open, twopence until it had caught its first mouse, fourpence when it was old enough for combat. He who stole a cat from the royal granaries forfeited either a milk ewe, with its fleece and lamb, or as much wheat as would cover the body of the cat suspended by its tall, with its nose touching the ground. A penny was a coin of great purchasing power in the tenth century.
